Kindly enter the following new claims:

Sub Q3 12. (New) A computer readable medium for handling of real time data transmitted on an isochronous channel within a computer system, the computer readable medium comprising:

a linked list of buffers, each buffer comprising a data field for storing the isochronous data, a condition field for storing condition data to be evaluated against a condition; a first pointer field for storing a first pointer to one of the buffers from which isochronous data is to be next accessed in response to the condition data satisfying the condition; and a second pointer field for storing a second pointer to one of the buffers from which isochronous data is to be next accessed in response to the condition data not satisfying the condition; and a program, executable on the computer system for receiving the isochronous data from a source device, loading the data into the linked list of
